S.K.T., Colonial Secretary's Letters Book, 26 May 1920,
W. U. Lawrence & Yando Connor (Pongo) to Gorman MacCarthy.
re: raid of H.M.S. Thistle in the Rio Pongo. Says that Thomas G. Curtis account of the incident is correct and that Pratas too exaggerated. Curtis only wanted to reheat what was due him. A breakdown in communication between land &
the thistle's captain led to the outbreak of hostilities.
Besides, the thistle raised a white flag and the locals let down their guard. So, let's forget the incident altogether.
SLA/CSLB  As Secretary to Lawrence & Conney, 7 June 1820 - [reply to 26 May 1820]

answer - must not confuse the debate between Curtis & Proctor with the murder of 2 British Officers & Sailors. If they are indeed the principal chiefs, then punish the guilty or accept the guilt personally.

The boat (schooner) of the Thistle is still in the possession of the Congo chiefs.

4 threatening terrible reprisals from TT.

SLA/CSLB 7 April 1826, Raffles to Stephen Gattiden, re Matacong.

Sanka Brima of Sumbuya has informed FT. that Gattiden has recently occupied Matacong with a party from Montbier, Foukarikh & Meliowine, places which are at war with Sumbuya. As consequence Matacong, which was neutral, is now in a state of hostility with Sumbuya. Sumbuya therefore seized a canoe from Montbier. This has involved the colony in the dispute of the ground. Therefore asks that Gattiden return to FT.

This should ease the situation somewhat.

CS to King Stephen I

The King was informed of the letter dated 21 June, wherein it was indicated that Campbell was present in Sumbuya, though the King was informed that this was not permitted by the treaty.

Campbell had complained to the King about his treatment at the factory, where he claimed to have found a quartermaster at Manyah.

The local headman had told Campbell that he needed to hire a local to operate the factory, but Campbell did not have the necessary funds.

The King, therefore, asked for assistance in treating Campbell and his associates.

The King added that he had sent the letter to the chief of Manyah.
